Plays for Today with the play Ti-Jean and His Brothers with CSEC® Study Guide
Derek Walcott, Dennis Scott and Errol Hill

Three outstanding plays by three of the Caribbean’s greatest playwrights, brought together in one volume.

Ti-Jean and his Brothers was Derek Walcott’s first venture into musical plays and is still his most popular work. A lilting St Lucian folk-tale, it tells the story of a poor family who dwells on the edge of a magical forest haunted by the devil’s spirits. The brilliance of Walcott’s writing draws us into the realms of fantasy where the actual and the miraculous collide. A prescribed play for the CSEC® examinations, this piece is accompanied with CSEC® study notes to match the requirements of the latest CSEC® English syllabus.

Dennis Scott’s An Echo in the Bone is set during a traditional Nine-Night Ceremony held to honour the spirit of the dead. Shattering sequential time in a series of dreamlike episodes the play takes us back to the time of plantations and slavery - and the savage murder of the white estate owner. Who killed Mr. Charles? The answers lie deep in the racial memory, they ‘echo in the bone’.

The giddy atmosphere of carnival is the setting for Errol Hill’s Man Better Man, a rumbustious, colourful comedy musical about stickfighters. With dance and song the battling troubadours and the calypsonian weave a tale of bravery, superstition and fraudulence. When first performed, the Times described it as ‘a blazing electrifying feast of rhythm and colour’.

The Complete Caribbean Teacher: Literacy

S. Joel Warrican

Confidently face the unique challenges of literacy development in the Caribbean region with this literacy methodology text presenting accessible guidance, best-practice approaches and clear advice on strategy.

• Develop your craft as a literacy practitioner, whether you are a teacher in training or a practising teacher, using traditional approaches emphasising best practice as well as alternative and non-traditional approaches to expand your repertoire.

• Bring teaching theory to life with helpful guidance for translating theory into practice in the classroom.

• Immediately understand and benefit from advice with accessible explanations and easy-to-read guidance.

• Expand knowledge and skills further with additional web support for practising teachers, trainee teachers and lecturers at www.tcct-literacy.exintra.net.

“A complete instructional guide and companion for Caribbean teachers in teacher-training institutions and practitioners in educational settings from Early Childhood to college and university levels. It educates, instructs and empowers all literacy practitioners and takes them to the threshold for leadership and advocacy for literacy development in the Caribbean that is informed by classroom-evidence based research”

Dr Paulette Feraria, Lecturer, Language & Literature Education Advocate and Activist for Social Literacy in School and Community, Mona School of Education, University of the West Indies.

Chapter 7: The respiratory system

What the examiners say
- Generally, candidates appear familiar with most of the concepts related to this topic. However, weaker candidates are unable to accurately label diagrams of the respiratory system, and accurately define important terms such as aerobic and anaerobic respiration.

Chapter 18: Sensitivity and Coordination in Animals and Plants

Section B: Life Processes and Disease

When you have completed this chapter, you will be able to:
• understand the meaning of the terms stimulus and response
• explain why response to stimuli is important for the survival of organisms
• define the terms receptor and effector
• explain the relationship between the receptor, the central nervous system and the effector
• identify the main sense organs and the stimuli to which they respond
• relate the structure of the human eye to its functions as a sense organ
• explain defects of vision and their correction
• understand the structure and functions of the human skin
• use simple flow diagrams to show the pathway along which an impulse travels in a reflex arc
• describe the response of plant stems and roots to light, touch and gravity.

In the body, coordination makes things happen at the right time by linking up different body activities. Humans have two organ systems that do this – the nervous system and the hormone or endocrine system. Plants also show coordinated responses to stimuli.

Experiment 14.1: The effect of concentration on reaction rate: the disappearing cross

Theory
When a solid is added to a solution, a new substance is formed. The substance may be white, white or black, or a range of other colours. The substance may be a gas, a liquid or a solid. The substance may give off heat or light. The substance may also be harmful or toxic.

Procedure
1. Using a measuring cylinder, place 50 cm³ of 0.1 mol dm⁻³ sodium thiosulphate into a conical flask.
2. Add 50 cm³ of 0.5 mol dm⁻³ sulphuric or hydrochloric acid to this solution, noting the time that you do so.
3. Place the conical flask over the cross and record the time it takes for the cross to be no longer visible when viewed from above. Discard the mixture and wash the conical flask.

11 Acids, bases and salts

In this chapter, you will study the following:

• acidity and alkalinity in relation to the pH scale;
• acids, acid anhydrides, and characteristic reactions of non-oxidising acids;
• acids in living systems;
• bases, alkalis and characteristic reactions;
• basic, amphoteric and neutral oxides;
• salts and preparations of salts;
• acidity and alkalinity of salts;
• uses and dangers of salts.

This chapter covers Objectives 7.1–7.9 of Section A of the CSEC Chemistry Syllabus.

Your early studies of acids and bases might have focused on their colourful reactions with indicators, or their corrosive properties, or applications such as 'acid rain' or even 'acid indigestion'.

11.1 Acids and bases – what is the difference?

It is easy to detect if a substance is an acid or a base by using an indicator or doing a pH test.

Indicators

Table 11.1 shows the colour changes of some common indicators. The photographs show in Figure 11.3 the colour changes with methyl orange. Generally most indicators can only be used to determine whether a solution is acidic or alkaline.

Definition of key terms.

Contains practical for objectives 7.2 and 7.10 of the CSEC® Chemistry syllabus.

Full colour pH scale.

Relevant examples for Caribbean students.
