

Sudan

The arid and semi-arid climate of central and northern Sudan makes this country vulnerable to desertification caused by lack of rainfall and mismanagement. Strategies to reduce desertification have focused on better water management and improved land use.

Figure 1
Location of Sudan

Figure 2 Sudan climate zones, ranging from extremely arid in the north to dry sub-humid in the south

Mean annual precipitation (mm)

- Under 100
- 100–400
- 401–800
- 801–1,200
- Over 1,200

- Capital
- River and Wadi
- National border

Get more from this issue of WIDeworld, with free online resources. See www.hoddereducation.co.uk/wideworldextras

ISBN 978-1-5104-4593-2

9 781510 445932

Please note single issues are not available for separate purchase

Tell us what you think  #hoddermags